STORY THAT SHOULD BE CARRIED TO END OF EARTH

That It Might Be Read by Some Man or Woman
Rich Enough in Gold to Give Another a Fair Chance in Life.

By FRANCES SHAFER.

There is a wealthy man in Chicago—Gordon Strong, his name is—who is solving the problem of loneliness by taking little boys into his home and giving them the advantage of education and luxury, in return for the new atmosphere they are creating about his place.

He started in with two brothers, one a two-year-old lad, the other six, and liked the experiment so well that he straightway added three more to his family circle, and he has taken them for the making of men, not dependents.

Will Change Tenor of Their Lives.
He says he wants to relieve his lonely hours, but one factor that back of the rather selfish desire for the wholesome variety of cheer that children carry about with them there is a well-defined purpose to change the whole tenor of their lives and to have a leading part in the transformation.

And one best realize what the transformation may be worth when the wind turns back, as it can with most of us, to some one who has all the natural equipment for success in life, but lacks the opportunity to develop it. Within our own observation there are men and women who would grace any station in life if only they had been carried along on the high wave of education and some of the softer ways that count rather more than perhaps they ought to.

And when we see boys and girls early in life dropping out of school to take up the burden of work before they are prepared for anything but the roughest harder lines of unskilled labor it seems a pity that someone should step in to pave the way for a brighter future.

Has Great Natural Gifts.
Not so long ago a woman crossed my path, and Nature had been very kind to her in gifts of heart and mind, and of face as well. Not even the evident lack of education and of culture could conceal her natural grace of manner, her open mind and heart. In her own restricted "case" she was looked to for advice, had friends by the score and was quite a queen. But she had come to maturity in an atmosphere of absolute ignorance and unthoughtfulness of speech, and when but a mere child took her place in the line of breadwinners with no chance to develop mentally and to grow by grace of cultured companionship. She is now working in a shop, and probably never will get above it, but one cannot talk with her, note her manner and all without speculating a bit as to her possible future had there been some kind fairy to give her even the ordinary advantages that we enjoy.

It is not such a long step that separates her from her present lot and one she might have filled with just a fair chance; but there was no one to help her take that step and she remains on a lower level than Nature intended her to occupy.

Not until the records of the experiment are all in can we measure the value of that boy venture out in Chicago, but it is a story that might well be carried to the ends of the earth. For it might be heard or read by some other man or woman, rich in gold and poor in the wealth of heart, some one ready and willing to take a wife and give him a real opportunity in life.

The Endless Pity of It.
For it is an endless pity to remain forever on the outskirts when training, education and association with finer men and women, finer things in life, may lift folk by great bounds from the world of hard, unproductive work into the circle that all of us aspire to reach.

Somewhere in the West—the facts have slipped from memory—there is a home made up of a man, his wife, and something like twenty adopted children. One by one they have been picked up from homes that offered no promise for the future, have been educated, guided and cared for, with love and the consciousness of a noble work the only compensation.

And one wonders if the man and woman who brought it all about ever complain of the emptiness of their lives. Men and women give their wealth in great lump sums; they endow colleges, church hospitals and the magnitude of their work rings to the skies, rightly enough, too.

But somehow the few who stop by the wayside and gather in little boys and girls whom they educate and enrich with the gift of a home—well, they are building for all time.

Cucumber and Tomato Salad.
Parse the "cukes," as the green grocers have named them, and cut them in half lengthwise. Place in ice water for half an hour, but do not salt the water, as that makes them hard to digest and softens them. Drain and place on crisp lettuce on a long narrow salad dish and serve.

PRACTICAL FOR WORK.

The above represents a charming morning dress, and made of figured gingham or plain pink or blue chambray it would be very pretty as well as serviceable. The waist is attached to a seven gored skirt, and opens at the front, which makes a very easy dress to get into. The pattern, No. 5217, is cut in size 32 to 42 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 3 yards of 36-inch material. The pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the Pattern Department of The Washington Herald.

WOMEN IDENTITY TO BE PRESERVED

At last women are breaking into the city directory. It is happening in Seattle in a sufficient degree. The Seattle directory for 1912 is being compiled with a wife's name listed in parentheses immediately after her husband's. This will make it possible in Seattle to find Mary Smith even though married. Elsewhere she gets unutterably lost as Mrs. John Smith or Mrs. James Smith or Mrs. Somebody Else Smith, who, of course, is equally as likely to be Elizabeth Smith or Jane Smith or Mary Smith. In her own name as well as her husband's, why can't directory makers everywhere let her into their pages? Social and business women, to say nothing of women themselves, would thereby be served.

Freezing Creams and Ices.

Before turning the ice cream or water ice mixture into the freezer can be sure that the can is properly adjusted in the freezer and the dasher in place right side up. Pour in the mixture, put on the cover, fasten the crank, and give it a turn or two to see that all is right. A four-quart freezer will need ten pounds of ice and two quarts of salt for freezing ice cream. For freezing sherbet or water ice, about one-third salt to two-thirds ice may be used. A layer of ice from four to five inches deep may be put in the bottom of the freezer; then a layer of salt two inches deep. Pack down well with stick or the handle of a hatchet, continuing the layers, having ice three inches, salt one inch deep to the top of the can. Turn the crank slowly and steadily until it moves very hard.

When frozen remove the crank, wipe, then lift the lid, being careful not to let any salt fall into the can; remove the dasher, scrape it off, scrape the cream from the sides of the can and beat and work steadily with a long-handled spoon until the cream is smooth. Replace the lid, cork the hole where the dasher was taken out, drain off two-thirds water from the tub, repack in layers with ice and salt, cover with a piece of bagging and stand away for two hours to ripen. When ready to serve dip the can quickly in cold water, wipe it, remove lid, and reverse can on serving dish.

Baked Potato Balls.

Rub cold mashed potatoes left from yesterday smooth with a spoonful of warm butter and soften with warm milk. Beat up an egg in it, stir until hot in a clean greased frying pan, not allowing it to "catch" on the side. Then let it cool. When cooled and stiff make into balls, roll these in flour and bake upon a greased pan until well browned. Place on a hot plate.

Fig and Rhubarb Jam.

Wash, peel, and dry four pounds of rhubarb and add a pound of figs, chopped fine. Put them into an earthen jar or casserole and add three pounds of sugar, the strained juice of two lemons, and half a cupful of water. Let the mixture simmer for forty minutes and then seal in jars. This is delicious and keeps well.

Wayside Mixed Pickles.

Two quarts of green tomatoes, two quarts of ripe tomatoes, three green peppers, one large ripe cucumber, two bunches of celery, three large onions, one small cabbage. Chop all together. Cover with half a cupful of salt and let it stand over night. Drain off all liquid in the morning. Add three pints of vinegar, two pounds of brown sugar, and two tablespoonfuls of mustard. Cook for one hour and seal.

Spanish Rice (Marion Harris Nell).
One cupful of boiled rice, four tablespoonfuls of grated cheese, four tablespoonfuls of tomato pulp, one teaspoonful of grated onion, one heaping tablespoonful butter, one small teaspoonful each of mixed mustard, curry powder, salt, pepper and browned crumbs. Melt the butter in a saucepan, put in the onion and curry powder, cook for a few minutes. Add the rice, cheese, tomato pulp and mustard, and mix thoroughly. Season carefully and turn into a baking dish. Sprinkle the surface with crumbs and brown in the oven. Serve hot with brown bread and butter.

Floating Island. Beat the whites of two eggs to a stiff froth and gradually beat in a cupful of jelly or jam. Fill a serving dish with whipped cream sweetened and flavored and drop spoonfuls of the frothed jelly upon it. Serve in dessert glasses.

Tea Punch (The Delineator). A pleasing variation of the conventional tea, and especially nice for a between-meal refreshment, is tea punch. For this, make an extra strong brew of tea; fill glasses with crushed ice; add one teaspoonful of powdered sugar, a very thin slice of lemon and one or two maraschino cherries. Pour over the whole the hot tea, and serve at once.

Stuffed Tomatoes (Mrs. Rorer). Boil two ounces of macaroni till tender. Rub hard-boiled yolks of two eggs to paste (boil at breakfast time, to save gas) add four tablespoonfuls cream. Beat together one tablespoonful each of butter and flour, add the egg and water from the milk. Stir over hot water until you have a thick, golden sauce; add one-half teaspoonful salt and a dash of pepper. Chop macaroni fine and add to sauce. Fill tomatoes, dust with crumbs and bake one-half hour. Serve with or without cream sauce.

Potatoes Baked in Cheese Sauce.
Place alternate layers of cold boiled potatoes, diced, and cheese sauce into a baking dish. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake till well browned.

New Rich Cause
Sunday 'Mischief'
in Nation's Capital

The substitution of the Continental Sunday for the Puritan Sabbath has not been accomplished without much criticism and a good deal of protest. There are many old-fashioned persons who hear of Sunday going-on as too awful to contemplate and as proof that the republic is going to destruction, writes A. Mayne Low in Harper's Weekly.

They bemoan the passing of the simple days when Washington took its pleasures quietly and rather ceremoniously: when to dine at 7, belatedly the extreme worldliness, and at 10 o'clock the lights were out and all respectable people were in.

It is the new rich, they say, who have worked all the mischief; the people who have built great houses and brought with them refinements of servants and transformed Washington from a village into a capital. It is the new rich who are always blamed for everything and who never given any praise, although it is to be presumed that in this rather chaotic scheme of ours they serve some useful purpose. Perhaps it is true that the new rich have brought about the change, but it is only in the last decade or so that Washington can be said to have become a capital in the broader sense.

The social soil, still in virgin state, waiting for the seed of letters and art, has become, nevertheless, the soil of a recognized capital. Washington is as yet too much a political center to be a capital as the term is used in Europe, where not only politics, but also literature, art, and science; it resembles rather, on a greatly magnified scale, a State capital where position is due to the accident of election.

Washington has not yet reached the calm serenity that is the charm of an Old World capital or a grande dame, who knows her world and is secure of her station and can afford to be gracious to her inferiors and to be easily polite to would-be equals. There is something still breathless in the atmosphere of this spoiled child of American cities.

Parsimonious Attitude Keeps Washington from Adopting Plan of Moving Picture Shows in Parks—No Money for Project.

Washington would unquestionably be abreast of the fashion and would have free motion picture shows in its government parks, if Congress were not so parsimonious in drawing up its District appropriation bills. The plan has met with approval from all sides, but Congress stands in the way of the project.

For it is not likely that a body of economists will appropriate a sum for free "photoplay" performances, when it will not give the municipality enough policemen to insure the best protection of its residents and their property.

The plan is to hold the motion picture shows in the various parks of the city upon a schedule somewhat similar to that for the public band concerts. A show would be held every evening in some part of the city. The cost would be small—not more than 10c for each performance.

"The plan appeals to me," said Dr. William M. Davidson, superintendent of schools, last night. "If properly conducted the free motion picture shows could be made instructive and educational as well as simply enjoyable. The project is capable of being made a most valuable institution. The one great requisite, however, would be strict censorship. Pictures of only the highest type should be used."

Rudolph Not Optimistic.
Cuno H. Rudolph, President of the Board of Commissioners, said last night that while the plan itself was probably a commendable one, there was little likelihood of its being put into effect in the near future.

As an example of the work it is doing toward the prevention of tuberculosis and for better general public health conditions, not only in the District of Columbia, but throughout the country, the Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis of the District of Columbia, has arranged to distribute to each of 4,000 or 5,000 delegates and visitors to the Fifteenth International Congress on Hygiene and Demography, which convenes in Washington in September, a copy of a code of health rules, formulated by the association and a copy of a set of resolutions relating to the pasteurization of milk.
